

Press release November 3rd 2009
steve@39internet.co.uk
0771 981 8959

Christmas Crafts Fayre at the Workhouse.

Weekend of 21 & 22 November, free entry

Christmas with a difference

Launched in 2008, Llanfyllin Workhouse is a brand new community project and charity dedicated to renovating the historic Workhouse buildings known as y Dolydd, creating a space for community and creativity and dedicated to sustainability.

Catch us on television!! We play hosts to the BBC Wales' 'Changing Lives - Going Green', a 6 part series due to air from mid November, where a suburban family are challenged to experience life as part of low-impact community here at the Workhouse. The family stayed in yurts for 2 weeks and learned how to make their own bread, skin a rabbit, make greenwood furniture, live off grid and make a compost toilet, amongst other things.

Come along to our next event and find out more:

Avoid the holiday crowds and do something different this year, why not come along to the Workhouse at Llanfyllin and enjoy a feast of local hand-made crafts, gifts, fine food and mulled beverages?

Accompanied by live music and followed by an evening of traditional music and dance, with our own Welsh cider bar!

With over 30 stalls and a range of practical workshops; make your own gifts, cards and Christmas paper, decorations and more.

Also a chance to find more about this ground breaking project and how to get involved in the exciting programme of events we are putting together for next year.

www.llanfyllinworkhouse.org 256 words

note to editors

hi res versions of these images are available for download and publication - please credit Cordelia Weedon for all - (except the historic image). Images are from the Green Crafts Fayre at the Workhouse, August 2009

images at http://39internet.co.uk/workhouse/press_nov

-----ENDS-----